Leading Change: Supporting your team

Making change stick is just as important as designing and rolling out a change. Pay attention to how your team is doing and invest time and effort in seeing them through the change.

There are three areas - the head, heart, and hands - in which change takes place, and all three need to be connected for change to be sustained.

The data to be defined at the entiring of the be designated.
HEAD	HEART	HANDS
Key Questions	Key Questions	Key Questions
<ul> <li>Does your team member understand why they need to change?</li> </ul>	<ul><li> Are they committed to the new way?</li><li> Are they showing up to work engaged?</li></ul>	<ul> <li>Do your team members know what they need to do differently?</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>Do they know how the change connects to the vision and strategy?</li> </ul>	Resistant? Disinterested?	<ul> <li>Does your team member have the knowledge and skills to do their work?</li> </ul>
		<ul> <li>Do they know where to go if they need resources and support?</li> </ul>
Tips & Tricks	Tips & Tricks	Tips & Tricks
<ul> <li>Discuss the business environment and challenges we face. Help people understand the broader context.</li> </ul>	<ul><li> Give people time to absorb the change and ask questions.</li><li> Encourage people to talk openly about</li></ul>	<ul> <li>For those who are starting to take action, be clear about priorities for action.</li> </ul>
Communicate more than you think you need to. Share information and updates, and reinforce the purpose of the	their feelings. Listen and acknowledge without responding defensively. Ask people what they need to make the change work for them.	<ul> <li>Encourage cooperation and collaboration. Recognize behaviors and results that are aligned with the change.</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>Remind people about what's in front of them and how their work objectives</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>Make yourself highly visible, available, and approachable.</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>Know what resources are out there – from training to EAP – that you can direct them to.</li> </ul>
keeps the organization going.		<ul> <li>Focus on what they can control.</li> </ul>